COVID-19

Almost overnight, COVID turned the future of work into the current way we work.

Distributed (remote) organizations

More changes will likely come as businesses regroup and the economy adjusts from the pandemic's disruption.

The New Norm -- Work From Home (WFH)

Before the health crisis, two out of three CEO's believed agility is critical for success.

Recent events demonstrate this truth as businesses scramble to operate as 100% remote companies:

- Pulling in external talent to handle unprecedented surges in demand.
- Develop new services within days to meet customer needs.

AGILITY

NEW SHIFT -- WFH

Confusing?

Take 5 seconds and scan your environment?

If you live in a baboon troop in the Serengeti, you only have to work three hours a day for your calories, and predators don't mess with you much. What that means is you've got nine hours of free time every day to devote to generating psychological stress toward other animals in your troop.

Robert Sapolsky, Ph.D

Learning Point?

Open environments with people talking and walking decreases productivity and elevates cortisol levels (2018).

Auditory and visual distractions in the remote (home) environment yield a 10% decline in productivity (2019).

SET A BOUNDARY FOR HOME AND WORK MODE

Design Cognitive Associations

Two Ideal Settings:

1. One for Work: Focused Work & Data Analysis
2. One for Calls/Meetings: Zoom & Team Collaboration

Cognitive Trigger -- Brain State

e.g playlist, focus candle, clothing, a mug, a plant

GREAT NEWS!

Many organizations have been working remotely for decades.

Best Practices for MANAGING
REMOTE WORKERS

Check-In

Establish a daily call, text, or email with your remote employees.

If their work is highly collaborative, a quick team huddle works magic.

Communication Options

Visual cues allow for increased “mutual knowledge” amongst coworkers, and also reduce the sense of isolation among teams.

Video is useful for complex or sensitive conversations, as it feels more personal than written or audio-only communication.

Establish “Rules Of Engagement”

Set expectations for the frequency, means, and ideal timing of communication for your team.

e.g. “We use videoconferencing for daily check-in meetings, but we use phone calls when something is urgent.”

Let your employees know the best way and time to reach you throughout the workday.

Keep an eye on communication amongst team members (to the extent appropriate), to ensure that they are sharing information as needed.

Remote Social Interaction

Structure ways for employees to interact socially (that is, have informal conversations about non-work topics) while working remotely

Beginning of team calls just for non-work items, virtual escape room, cooking class, etc.

Virtual events help reduce feelings of isolation, promoting a sense of belonging, and give employees an opportunity to learn different things.

Encouragement & Emotional Support

Research on emotional intelligence and emotional contagion tells us that employees look to their managers for cues about how to react to sudden changes or crisis situations (Goleman, 2018).

If a manager communicates stress and helplessness this will cause a “trickle-down” effect on employees (Goleman, 2017).

Two-Pronged Leadership

1. Acknowledge the stress and anxiety that employees may be feeling in these circumstances

Phrases such as “we’ve got this,” or “this is tough, but I know we can handle it,” or “let’s look for ways to use our strengths during this time.”

2. Provide affirmation of their confidence with their teams

With this support, employees are more likely to take up the challenge with a sense of purpose and focus.

Reduce Loneliness

According to a Gallup poll of 9,917 employed U.S. remote employees, those that attended virtual office hour meetings with managers were 81% more productive, and 74% happier. Employees that did not attend office hours exhibited heightened levels of loneliness.

Face-to-face time builds quality relationships, thus enabling trust and encouraging communication.

Reduce Burnout

Remote employees are tougher to diagnose with burnout because you can't see changes in their personality on a day-to-day basis.

Rethink which attributes constitute going “above and beyond.” Working longer hours, answering emails late at night, and putting time in on the weekend.

Work Life Balance.

Healthy Habits

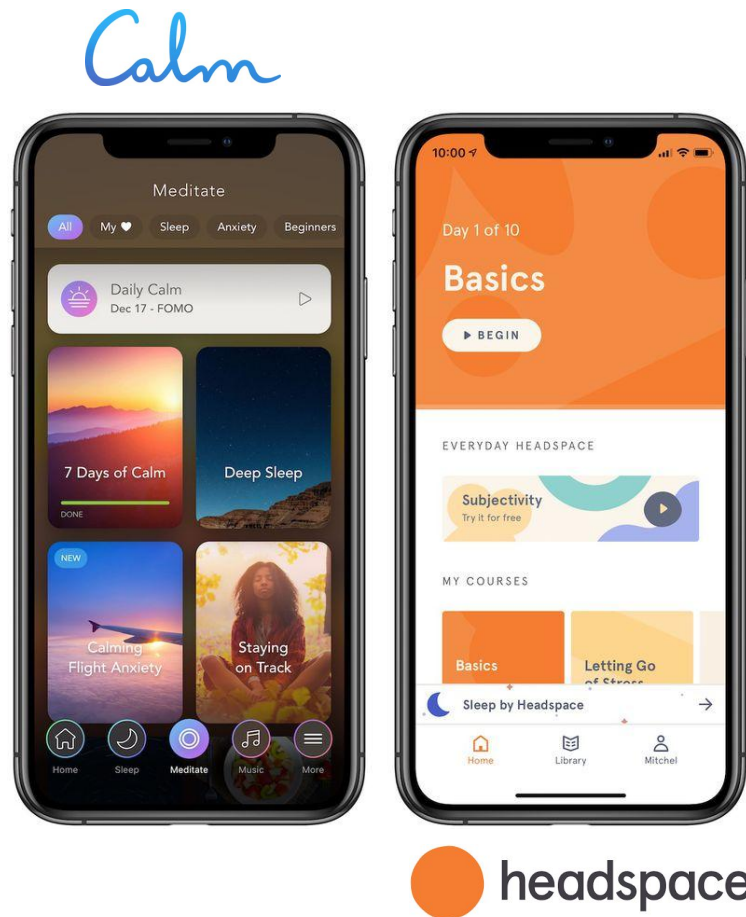

Total Time Sitting Before 6PM*

*Based on aggregated and anonymous data from over one million Fitbit users in 2015

Focus on Health

1. Take walk breaks
2. Exercise
3. Meditate
4. Drink lots of water
5. Get up every hour
6. Nourishing food
7. Make sure to take a lunch break

PLEASE DO NOT

Virtual Meeting Etiquette & Engagement

DURING THE MEETING

CLEAN YOUR SCREEN

Close out unnecessary tabs before screen-sharing ... especially your social media feeds.

SILENCE, PLEASE

Place other devices, like your cell phone, on silent.

IF YOU CAN SEE THEM ...

Think about your actions and remember that everyone can see you. Stay seated if you're only dressed from the waist up. Salsa desk dancing is best done in studio.

MUTE YOURSELF

Unless you are speaking or unless it's an open dialogue, eliminate the sounds from your side. That includes typing, rustling papers, and tap-dancing.

MULTIPLE PARTICIPANTS, SINGLE AUDIO

If you are in a room with multiple people joining the same meeting, each person will need to Zoom in on their own device; however, only one device in the room should have the audio connection.

Please note that simply muting your computer is not enough - when you Zoom in, each participant will need to turn off the audio interface, except the single audio line.

MAKE EYE CONTACT

Speak to the camera and not the screen, so that your audience feels that you are actually talking to them.

ONLY YOU

Zoom in from your own device - this ensures a dedicated video view of you.

SAY NO TO MULTI-TASKING

Be present, or be absent, but don't be both.

CHAT ROOM

Use the group or private chat function for questions, so as not to disturb a presenter.

Virtual Meeting Engagement

Let's face it, in most meetings there's often little to zero accountability for engagement.

When we are together in a room, we often compensate with coercive eye contact.

A recent Harvard study found 5 variables (outlined as rules) as drivers of virtual engagement.

Camera on Rule

60-Second Rule

Never engage a group in solving a problem until they have felt the effects of the problem. Do something in the first 60 seconds to help them experience it.

You might share shocking or provocative statistics, anecdotes, or analogies that stress the importance.

The Responsibility Rule

When people enter any social setting, they tacitly work to determine their role.

The biggest engagement threat in virtual meetings is allowing team members to unconsciously take the role of observer.

Create an experience of shared responsibility early on in your presentation.

Give them a medium with which to communicate with one another

Examples: video conference,
Slack channel, messaging
platform, audio breakouts.

Encourage breakout groups.

Nowhere to Hide Rule

The 5-Minute Rule

Make sure to have engagement from another member of the group every 5 minutes.

This can be a question, a task, a problem that needs to be answered, or have someone else speak.

What are our policies in regards to pets in the office? I'm assuming that was the case.
